The trouble is, Paul is in love with Marsha, but for good reason she doesn't consider Paul to be marriage material. When Marsha, her father and best friend begin to investigate the goings-on behind the pretty web pages, her allies are destroyed in mysterious fashion. Afraid for her own life from the man who claims to love her, Marsha nonetheless chooses to pursue the truth about the company that has made her rich. But Love.com is now a worldwide phenomenon, and won't give up its secrets easily. All her courage and smarts may not be enough to unravel the Love.com mystery and save her own life. And while she's at it, she wouldn't mind finding the love she was created for. Love.com is smart, original, fun and funny.
