Church Planting Movements Booklet [David Garrison] David Garrison

This book began as an assignment to profile the growing number of Church Planting Movements that are appearing in our work around the world. As the International Mission Board's associate vice president for strategy coordination, I was given responsibility to describe the qualities and characteristics of this phenomenon. To accomplish this, I sought the input from a wide range of missionaries, members of regional leadership teams, missiologists, researchers and mission administrators. My primary sources were missionaries who have been personally involved in Church Planting Movements.
