At last, a book that not only addresses the challenges faced by those who raise funds for their Catholic school or parish, but also offers insights, ideas, and tips on how to enliven current fundraising activities. Gray provides guidance on how to attract volunteers; deal with resistant parishioners; breathe new life into old fundraisers; and bring in new donors. She also shows how to evaluate and dramatically improve current fundraising activities; how to capitalize on money-making assets that are usually overlooked; and how to engage children, teens, and clergy in fundraising activities. While providing plenty of fundraising ideas, real-life stories and examples, and tips for increasing participation, the author shows how a fundraising program can mature into an endeavor that reaches far beyond the school and parish boundaries.
