Waking Up Dead: Four Tales of Impending Peril Tom Wick

There are people who look at Death with trepidation. There are some who can't wait for it. And there are some who bring Death to you.

In Waking Up Dead we meet four men, ready for Death in any of those three ways.

Pyre, or the man with no name, was born because his drugged-up mother was $500 short of an abortion. He was born and raised in squalor. Raised on TV, computers, chicken pot pies and six liters of soda a day. The poster child for obesity and the butt of all jokes. Yet he becomes so much more, re-invents himself but turns to a life of revenge. Is this what he really wants?

Detective Jacob Green lives with the burden of an undisclosed pain. Living a life of solitude, he has invented a way of reading thoughts, a tool he hopes to use in finding the bad guy. But who is the bad guy?

A reluctant starship fighter pilot, Mark, becomes stranded on a planet whose waters provide immortality. Does he want to live forever without the love of his life? Mark learns he is one of two inhabitants on this strange and uncharted planet and unfortunately it's kill or be killed. And the reward is life eternal.

Guiles Lancaster III doesn't even know why he is alive. His life is a mystery to him. There are temporal rewards for being immortal but for how many thousands of years can one enjoy the wanton desires of the natural man?
