South Staffords at War: August 1914-December 1915 Mr Andrew Thornton

This book is an anthology; a collection of biographies, newspaper reports and diaries selected from research that I have undertaken on soldiers of The South Staffordshire Regiment over the past 25 years. The book has been divided into two parts. While not a detailed history of the regiment or the war, Part 1 describes the operations in which the South Staffords took part during 1914 and 1915 in order to place the material contained in the rest of the book in context. Part 2 is a chronological narrative, composed of newspaper reports that show how the soldiers of the regiment described their own experiences, and how these were reported to their family and friends at home, and biographies of officers and men of who served with the regiment during the first year of the war. The three hundred soldiers that I have selected to be included in this book represent a cross-section of the men who served with the South Staffords during the Great War. They came from a variety of social backgrounds, and the biographical information has been collated from various sources that, in recent years, have expanded greatly as more documents have been made available to researchers. Transcriptions of two diaries, one of which that has not been previously published, are also included. The appendices explain the functions of the Infantry Record Offices at Lichfield and the Commonwealth War Graves Commission memorials that commemorate those soldiers who were killed but whose remains could not be found or identified after the war. It is hoped that this collection of material will be of interest to researchers, medal collectors, military, local and family historians, and those who are interested in the lives of soldiers who served during the Great War.
