TIME America's National Parks: 100 Years of Preserving Our Land and Heritage The Editors of TIME
When the National Park Service was born in 1916, its mission was to preserve America's most distinctive natural spaces including the amazing Grand Canyon, the majestic Redwoods in California as well as Yellowstone Park, Acadia National Park and many more. In addition, beginning in 1933, the NPS began to protect the nation's heritage as well. Today the agency welcomes guests to Philadelphia's Independence Hall, Abraham Lincoln's birthplace, Thomas Edison's laboratory and many more treasured byways of our national life including the majestic parks that most people associate with the service.
